Repeal of Sales Tax Would Break Faith With U. S.

So Says Governor Futrell—Substitute Revenue Must Be Found

EDUCATION, RELIEF

Federal Aid Would Be Withdrawn on Both If Tax Money Fails

BULLETIN

WYNNE, Ark.—(AP)—Indications at noon Thursday were that all parts of the state would be represented at the meeting, begun Thursday morning by Arkansas sales tax repeal advocates.

Delegates are already here from as far as Texarkana, on the southwestern edge of the state.

The gathering moved from the gymnasium to the high school auditorium to accommodate the increasing crowd.

LITTLE ROCK—Asserting that repeal of the sales tax law without an effective substitute revenue measure would be equivalent to "breaking faith" with the federal government, Governor Futrell Wednesday issued a second sales tax statement in which he offered to call a special session of the legislature to enact a substitute law, provided a majority of the legislators agreed upon a substitute.

The statement contained a repetition of his former offer to call the legislature into special session to repeal the sales tax law, if a majority of the senators and representatives indicate that they want to vote to repeal.

Futrell's Statement

The governor's statement follows: "If the sales tax law is repealed, and nothing is put in its place, I expect federal aid for the schools and our unemployables to be withdrawn. This would be a calamity in itself. In addition thereto, business in this state will be almost ruined by the withdrawal of federal relief. Other forms of federal patronage to the state may be curtailed or stopped entirely. This means that many of our public schools will be closed indefinitely. Some of the more wealthy districts may stay open, but this is doubtful since the withdrawal of federal funds will seriously affect business throughout the state. Forty thousand unemployables must suffer. There will be little provision for them left except what the counties may afford. The counties are bankrupt, and can do nothing. The last hope of these people will be the charity of their neighbors. An unemployable is a person who cannot work.

Is there anything that can take the place of the sales tax? Yes, but the legislature will not pass it. The late legislators had before it every conceivable plan to raise money. Of these, the whiskey, racing and sales tax were the only ones passed. These measures did not raise the amount requested by the federal government, but Washington agreed to accept them and to resume federal aid to the schools and the unemployables.

"If the sales tax is repealed and nothing is put in its place, faith with the federal government will have been broken, and you must expect the millions which it is now pouring into the state to cease.

"Prior sources of state revenues have almost dried up except the gasoline and automobile license taxes. Years ago these were pledged to pay road bonds and not now available for relief purposes. The legislature could not raise existing rates of taxation. Property taxes are now too high. New sources of revenue had to be found for our schools, our suffering unemployables and meet requirements imposed by the federal government as a condition to aid for our schools and poor.

"If our senators and representatives will agree upon a substitute bill for the sales tax, I will give them an opportunity to enact it into law.

"I repeat what I have previously said, that if the legislature desire to repeal outright the sales tax law, they will not be denied the opportunity to do so.

Commissioner Phillips
W. E. Phillips, state commissioner of education, issued a statement appealing to all citizens "to consider what the increased educational opportunities to be derived from sales tax revenue will mean to the children of the state," before asking legislators to vote to repeal the law.

Mr. Phillips recalled that a sales tax was suggested early last fall as a possible source of $2,500,000 additional revenue needed to guarantee minimum school terms of six months in

F. D. Sustained as House Passes TVA Bill by 277 to 100

Major Provisions Opposed by President Completely Removed

SWEEEPING VICTORY

House Reverses Previous Stand on Holding Company Abolition

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—After eliminating every major provision objectionable to President Roosevelt the house Thursday passed legislation broadening the power of the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA).

It now goes back to the senate for action on amendments added by the house. The differences will probably be adjusted by a conference committee representing both the senate and house.

The vote in the house on final passage was announced as 277 to 100 opposed.

Twice before the final vote the house affirmed action eliminating a clause giving the TVA only a limited time in which to work out a self-sustaining power development.

House Supports F. D.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Four times in a row the house Wednesday voted smashing victories for the administration on the Tennessee Valley Authority bill. Every vital change backed by the White House was frittered into the measure in a sharp reversal of the revolt which knocked holding company abolition out of the utility bill.

Final vote was held over until Thursday. There was little doubt however, that the measure would be returned to the senate in a form acceptable to President Roosevelt.

Pending as the house advanced was one last attempt by Republicans to obtain a reversal. Representative Andrews, Republican New York, made a motion to send the bill back to the Military Committee under instruction to put back in some of the restrictive provisions opposed by the White House.

Provisions of Amendments

These were the administration amendments and the margins by which they carried:

To remove a limitation under which TVA would be forced to sell power to chemicals at not less than producer costs after July 1, 1937—98 to 67.

To liberalize proposed rigid control of the controller general over TVA expenditures—162 to 120.

To eliminate a provision barring TVA construction of power transmission lines substantially duplicating existing private lines—130 to 102.

To give TVA control of erection of all dams and appurtenant works on the Tennessee river and its tributaries so that it might carry out a "unified" program of developing the Tennessee basin—accepted on a voice vote.

When Representative McLean, Republican, New Jersey, bitter TVA opponent, forced a separate roll call on elimination of the transmission line provision, the house stood by its previous decision, 237 to 145.

Andrews' recomittal motion proposed restoration of the original provision giving the controller general strict supervision of TVA spending and putting back the restriction on below-cost sales, moving the date forward to July 1, 1938.

The first suggestion was ruled out of order because the house already had acted on it. This left tomorrow's vote on the production cost phase of the motion.

Rankin Elated

Representative Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, an ardent TVA supporter, wrote out a statement saying, "We have won a great victory in the TVA fight."

As the house showed in an amendment after another and a trace was visible of last week's rebellion against the president's proposal to abolish unnecessary holding companies by 1942.

Old Age in Repose

Typifying the graceful repose of old age, the restful figure of the spinster pictured here in her "frill" bonnet and shawl, slyly "strutting" her winks, was judged the best portrait of 500 prints submitted at the annual salon of photography, held this year at the San Diego exposition. The subject, "Miss Jessie Brown," was taken by Donald Young, of Edinburgh, Scotland. The picture won first prize in the portraiture class.

Department of Interior Official Accuses Maine Republican

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Ernest Gruening, official of the Department of the Interior, testified Thursday to the house rules committee that Representative Brewster, Maine Republican, told him he intended to remain in his hotel and not be present at the house vote on the bill abolishing "unnecessary" holding companies.

The house investigation into lobbying started after Brewster asserted that Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney, threatened to stop construction on the Passamaquoddy (Maine) dam unless he voted to abolish certain holding companies.

Coxey Nominated by Farm-Laborites

81-Year-Old Leader of "Coxey's Army" Offered for Presidency

CMAHA, Neb.—(AP)—"General" Joseph S. Coxey, 81, who advocated $500,000,000 inflation to give $100 to each unemployed person, Wednesday night was nominated to run for president by the few delegates attending the "national" Farmer-Labor party convention. The aged Missillon (O.) man who led Coxey's "army" in its march on Washington in 1894, had come to the convention saying he had no presidential aspirations. He was the party's 1932 candidate.

Senator Huey Long, Louisiana Democrat, had been mentioned by some delegates as a possibility for the nomination. But Coxey was named without opposition by Leslie Erickson, Minneapolis, as his running mate.

'Trade' With Long Near in Orleans

Mayor "Won't Quit," But Caucus Determines to Open Negotiations

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—As the Mayor of New Orleans, Mayor Walmesley Thursday appeared ready to surrender to Senator Long's opposition developed in several quarters.

Mayor Walmesley, deserted by some of his followers, reiterated his declaration that he wouldn't quit.

Confronted with his local patrons and depriving the city of its tax-payers' powers by halting the city's authority to the state, Mayor Walmesley admitted his leadership in secret caucuses.

The seriousness of the situation facing the Walmesley faction, the "Old Regulars," was increased when City Commissioner A. Miles Pratt and Joseph P. Skelly broke with the mayor and announced they would no longer endorse the Louisiana "disicator."

This gave rise to reports they would leave a movement to swing the city government over to Long. However, the caucus adopted a resolution expressing confidence in the mayor's fight against Long control. The "Old Regulars" leaders authorized appointment of a committee of seven "to act in the interest of the regular Democratic organization." They will be free to negotiate directly with Senator Long or his representatives relative to a peace agreement.

$1,600 in Jewels Stolen From Horse Trader; Two Held

Rooming-House Operator, Cook, Held on Tom Carrel's Complaint

RINGS, WATCH, CASH

Seven Rings Valued at From $400 to $50—Reward of $200 Posted

A proprietor of a Hope rooming house and a negro cook were held under bond here Thursday following their arrest late Wednesday after the mysterious disappearance of more than $1,600 in jewelry.

Those held are: Opal Walls, operator of a rooming house on East Third street; and Del Williams, negro cook. They were arrested late Wednesday by Deputy Sheriffs R. O. Robins and Lee Diehl on information filed with Deputy Prosecuting Attorney P. T. Staggs by Tom Carrel, horse-trader, and owner of the jewelry.

Officers carefully guarded statements as to the progress made thus far in the investigation of the alleged theft. The rooming house was searched late Wednesday and several persons were questioned at length.

Carrel told officers that he and Mrs. Carrel placed the jewelry, including seven diamond rings and a seven-jewel watch in a trunk in their room Sunday night.

Discovery of the theft was made Tuesday night when they returned from a trip to Texarkana, negro cook.

Carrel told officers that his wife left the key in the trunk, forgetting to remove it when the Texarkana trip was made. The theft of $15 in currency, left in a handbag in the room, also was reported to officers by Carrel.

Mr. Carrel posted a reward of $200 for the return of the seven rings and conviction of the thief. One of the rings was valued at $400, a second at $350, and the others ranged in value from $250 down to $50.

The license qualifies Mr. Slusser to approve class of cotton for purpose of loans or for banking institutions loaning money on cotton. Mr. Slusser is the only person in the county holding such a license.

Flood Toll Hits 53; May Increase

6 More Missing as Upstate New York Waters Begin to Subside

By the Associated Press
The cloudy flood-waters of up-state New York and eastern Pennsylvania were in least Thursday as officials reckoned the cost of Mother Nature's ravages at 53 deaths and property damage in excess of 26 million dollars.

Help for the victims is converging on their stricken areas from a dozen sources.

Known deaths from floods in five states Wednesday night rose to 51 as health officials sought to prevent a possible outbreak of typhoid fever.

Six persons were missing, the temporary homeless numbered 3,000 and the property damage was estimated at more than $25,000,000.

In upstate New York the waters slowly receded and Governor Lehman termed the situation "improving generally." The state counted 40 deaths, listed most of the homeless and damage.

In a statement, Miss Cotton said that none of the board members were getting a penny to fill out these applications and had no view of receiving any money—but were doing the work for aged persons for their benefit merely as a welfare act. A

Jury Hard-Boiled on Liquor Cases

Alibis Fail to Obtain Clemency in Little Rock Trials

LITTLE ROCK.—Hard-boiled juries in Pulaski circuit court imposed heavy fines Wednesday upon persons—indicted three white women—convicted for violating the state liquor law. Five defendants were found guilty, none was acquitted, and four pleaded guilty.

The heaviest fine was imposed upon Mrs. J. R. Sullivan of North Little Rock. She was fined $500 for selling untaxed liquor and $100 for possessing liquor without a tax.

The jury which tried Lonnie Green fined him $300 for selling untaxed liquor but relented on the possession charge and tried to return a verdict of guilty without a fine, but Judge Abner McGehee said he could not accept such a verdict. He followed the jury's recommendation, however, and imposed the minimum fine of $5 on the second charge.

The recent flood was used as an alibi by Vernon Melton, who lives on the river bank east of North Little Rock, and the jury reported it was hopeless to deadlock on the issue of Melton's guilt of selling untaxed liquor. However, the jury found him guilty of possession and fined him $100.

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Improved Diet Brings Improved Living

Omit from your daily diet any one of a number of substances that you may think are inconsequential, and your life may be profoundly disordered as a result. Add certain appropriate foods, even though the diet otherwise may seem to be entirely satisfactory, and your life may be greatly improved.

This important fact was brought out recently when Dr. James S. Mc Lester, in his presidential address before the American Medical Association, prophesied that man's place in future history will depend in no small degree on the food he eats.

Improvement of man and of animals has already been established as possible by improvement of the diet.

For instance, the children of immigrants to the United States are of a finer stock physically than are their ancestors. Chinese living under improved food conditions in Hawaii grow larger than people of the same racial strain in China.

From Japan comes the report that, when groups of children in Tokyo were given milk as a supplement to their diets, there was observed not only an increase in their weight and height, but the children were more cheerful and happy and turned in better records than those who did not receive the additional milk.

Dr. Mc Lester emphasized particularly the importance of educating people properly in the subject of diet. Much of our malnutrition comes from unenlightened selection of foods made by mothers who have to restrict the budget for food too greatly.

"It is unfortunate," says Doctor Mc Lester, "that many of the cheaper foods, such as potato, which carry the greatest number of calories and have the highest nutritive value, fall far short of providing in sufficient quantities such essential food factors as vitamins, minerals and good proteins.

Vitamins and minerals can be obtained in abundance in fruits and vegetables, while proteins of high biologic value are found in meats, eggs and milk; but these are all among the more costly foods."

It is important, therefore, in selecting foods to be certain that you do not pay more for foods of lesser food value.

Most of our diets are still determined by the habits of our ancestors. If the food habits of any group of people are faulty because of prejudices, a gradual deterioration of that group of people will occur.

It is not possible, however, to select a suitable diet on the basis of prejudices. It must be selected on an exact knowledge of the constituents in the foods concerned and their values in the human diet.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

Going Sailing? Well, It's a Tricky Sport—This Book Contains Advice for Amateur Yachtsmen

This reviewer had always thought that some day he would like to buy a sailboat with a cabin on it and put it in a summer or two lazily cruising about on the water. Now, however, he has read "Learning to Cruise," by H. A. Calahan, and he has just about concluded that life is entirely too short.

For cruising in a small boat, according to Mr. Calahan, is a complicated and exceedingly touchy sort of avocation. If things aren't just so, you lay yourself open to everything from mosquito bites to shipwreck.

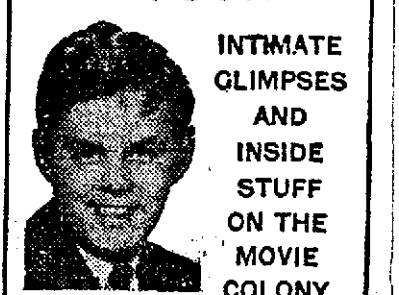

The shape of the hull is all-important; if you don't get it just so, your vessel for a safe, pleasant cruise will be ruined. The rig is an even more delicate matter, and if you err in setting it up and maintaining it you are liable to be dismantled in the first stiff gale.

You can't get along without an auxiliary motor unless you are an expert. If you do get one it probably will work when you need it most. The danger of fire is ever present. Your bin trunk will probably leak. If your anchor isn't just exactly tight, so your boat will pile up on a lee shore some fine night.

And so on. Now it says a good deal for Mr. Calahan's enthusiasm for his subject that he is able to recount all of these difficulties and still leave you feeling that cruising must be a lot of fun. My innocent notion that you just climbed aboard, hoisted the sail and let her rip seems to be all wrong; this book is a fine corrective for such delusions, and I imagine it would be an invaluable book for the man who has decided to turn yachtsman.

Published by Macmillan. It is priced at $2.50.

HOLLYWOOD GOSSIP

BY DAN THOMAS

Feel Tap Out Moods of Dancer

HOLLYWOOD—Clifton Webb, dean of Broadway's dancers, goes to work early every morning these days, to rehearse for the unpleasant time the dances he'll bring to the screen in Jean Crawford's next picture, "Elizance."

His rehearsal stage in the MGM studios is a strip of polished floor illuminated by the beam of a single flood light. And there he goes in training with all the seriousness of a boxer getting ready for a championship bout.

His pianist already on hand, Webb quickly changes into his dancing shoes. "All right, let's go," the stagecrafters cry. "The Continental" fly from the piano and the dancing actor moves across the floor, his nimble feet keeping perfect time with the music.

For five minutes without a pause he turns, twists, bends, hops and glides around the polished floor. Increasing years certainly haven't robbed him of any agility.

"Is that one of the dances you'll do in the picture?" "No, Mr. That was just a warm-up. I always do a fast step for five minutes to limber up before doing any actual rehearsing."

Camera Follows Him "Just a little warming up exercise, huh? I suppose you're going to show some real speed now."

"No. On the contrary, my principal dance for the picture is slow and rhythmic, stressing posture and mood over speed and agility. It's what you might term an interpretive dance that really tells a story by itself. It actually will help the picture progress."

"For that reason it will be difficult to film, because the camera will have to follow me constantly. The dance can't possibly be broken up into long shots and closeups. That would spoil the whole effect."

All the while he's talking, Webb is pacing restlessly back and forth. The steps he is using are already tried and true. He sits down in a chair and arises again almost immediately. He's ever restless.

"This type of dancing is not merely something you do with your feet," he explains. "It's an expression, from start to finish, of a mood which characterizes a story. I'll show you what I mean."

Whole Body Speaks He walks out on the floor and poses for the first step as the pianist starts beating out a slow, rhythmic tune. It's a new piece written especially for the film and hasn't even a title yet. Webb moves gracefully over the polished floor—his body, hands and facial expressions being every bit as important as the movement of his nimble feet.

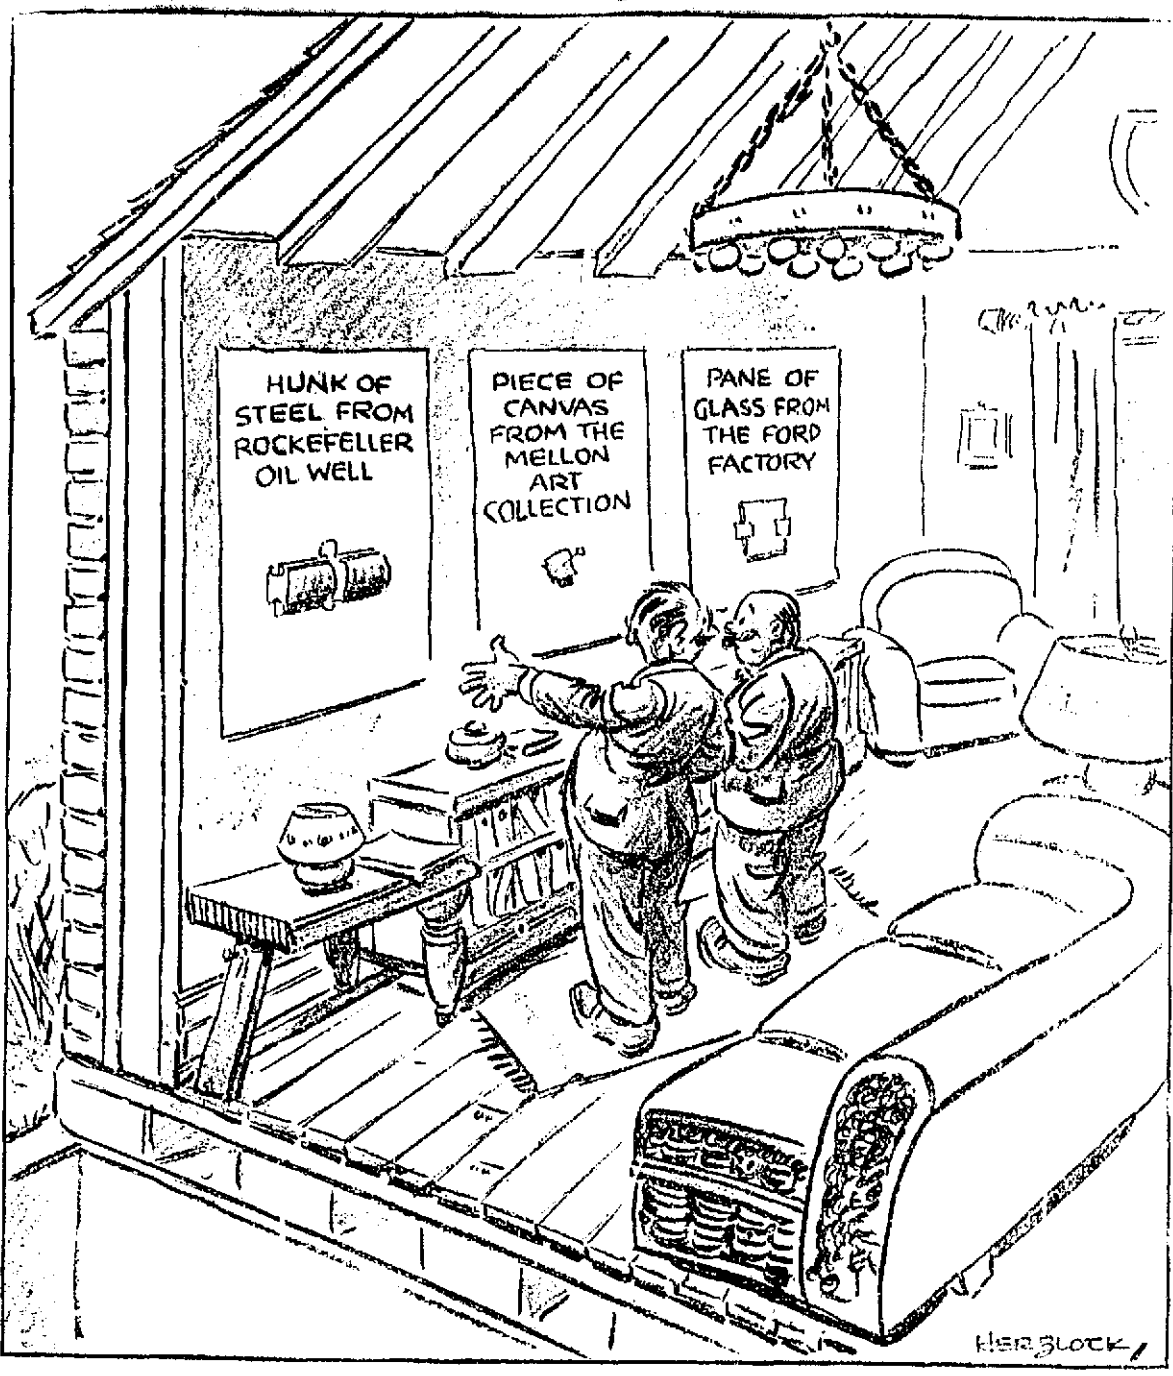

"This sort of dancing really is more difficult than a fast, hot-cha number," he remarks. "That's why I always warm up first. I have to be extremely limber to do such a routine."

"How long do you rehearse each day?" "About four or five hours when I'm working out a new routine, as I am now."

Work Agrees Irvin S. Cobb is a puzzled man. During the shooting of "Steamboat Bill," Director John Ford lost 10 pounds. Eugene Pallette lost 20 pounds. Bertie Churchill lost 10 pounds. Will Rogers lost six pounds and Cobb gained 22 pounds. "Try and figure that out!"

Silent Gravel If you've ever walked along a gravel path, you've probably noticed the crunch of your feet upon the stones. But just try to hear that crunch when you see an actor in the movies walking along a gravel path. The reason is that movie "gravel" is made of chopped cork painted white so that there will be no disturbing noise to interfere with the dialogue.

SUN-TAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JO DARLEN, dolishing her first year in college, receives word that her father is out of work. Jo decides to look for a job instead of going home. She confides this to her roommate, TUDY DAVIS, and to BETTIE PATTI, a girl athlete, to whom Jo is engaged.

Jo moves to a cheap furnished apartment. Her first day of job-hunting is disastrous but the second day she is hired for part time work in a small marine supply store.

She is alone in the store when a man enters and asks for the proprietor. He leaves, promising to return later and says, "Tell him Douglas Marsh was in." Jo is curious about this stranger whom she thinks the handsome man she has ever seen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER IV
WHEN he had gone, Jo reflected that she had never seen a man quite like this Douglas Marsh. There was some indefinable quality about him that stamped him as different, as a man among men. Naturally enough she could not help comparing him with Bret Paul. He was so much more certain of himself than Bret, so much more at ease with the world.

"But that's only because he's older," Jo told herself. "I'm used to being with college men. There's probably nothing unusual about this Marsh person at all. I'll probably discover that he's a salesman wanting to sell Mr. Brown an order of—of something or other."

Yet when Mr. Brown returned from lunch and Jo told him that Douglas Marsh had been in, he raised his eyebrows and said, "Marsh? Is that so? I wonder what he's got up his sleeve this time?"

"Is he a pretty good customer?" Jo asked. "He said he'd known you for a long time." "I'll say he's a good customer! Haven't you ever heard of Douglas Marsh?"

"No, I'm afraid I haven't." Mr. Brown chuckled. "Well, when he comes around you want to perk up and do your best smiling. Young Marsh is the richest bachelor around these parts. I've sold him plenty of stuff since he grew into long trousers. Why, he buys a new yacht just about whenever the old one gets a little wet!"

"He must be a silly person, then," Jo said, laughing. "Don't you think it? Plenty of young fellows would have gone absolutely crazy if they'd been left as much money as old man Marsh left Douglas. But young Marsh has kept his head, and he tries to spend his money where it'll do the most good. Trouble is, every time he invests in something it goes ahead and makes him some more money. He's like his old man that way."

ONCE familiar name came to Jo as Brown rattled on. A name she had read in the newspapers as a child, a name she'd heard her father mention more than once. "Is he the son of Aaron Marsh who died a few years ago?" Brown nodded. "That's the one. The old lady is still living. They say she's mighty hard to get along with, and she pesters young Marsh some when he's home. But he manages to spend a lot of time here, there and everywhere. I wonder if he's figuring on a new boat?" It was not long before Mr. Brown

Legislative panaceas differ little in custom from age to age. They all derive from the conviction that when fortune ceases to smile on the spend-thrift, legislation should frown on the frugal.—Harvey T. Harrison, Arkansas attorney, addressing Pennsylvania Bar Association.

If I had been there I could have told General Lee how to whip those fellows.—Senator Huey Long, on visit to Gettysburg battlefield.

"I see," said Brown, smiling. "I thought it wasn't like you to buy up nature and keep it all to your self."

"Everyone I've talked to is enthusiastic about the idea. I mentioned it last winter to several of my Hollywood friends. You know, they're always looking for a spot where they can really get away from the studios and the movie crowd. Peter Fragonet said he'd take one of the cottages for a couple of weeks."

"I never go to movies," said Brown, "so that don't mean anything to me. Maybe it does to Miss Darlen here."

JO laughed. "I'm trying to think. I've never talked with anyone who mentioned his name so blithely."

"I wasn't trying to be impressive," Marsh assured her, answering her laughter with his own. "I've known Pete Fragonet for years. I used to go sailing with him and Dick Barthelme and Ronald Colman. You'd like them—and they're very mortal men, just like Walt and me."

"Never mind the movie stars," said Mr. Brown impatiently. "I want to sell you those two 26-foot speed boats on the floor out there. Just the thing for Great Lake." He turned to Jo. "Look in that Crowley Boat catalog there, Miss Darlen, and let me see what we can quote Mr. Marsh on them."

From then on it was all business, with Jo feverishly checking and re-checking prices, ascertaining freight rates and shipping dates. When they had finished it was almost 2 o'clock.

"I had no idea it was so late," exclaimed Marsh, looking at his watch. "I'm afraid I've been very inconsiderate, Miss Darlen. You must be famished. Won't you let me take you to lunch?"

"Thank you so much, Mr. Marsh. But I often take just a cup of tea in the afternoon, and I can drop in anywhere for it."

"Well," said Marsh, reaching for his hat and stick. "I won't insist, because the fact is I should be running along myself. Promised to see a fellow at two. But I'd really like to make up for it, somehow. What about dinner tonight?"

The second invitation took Jo by surprise. "Why—I—" She happened to meet her employer's glance, and he nodded almost imperceptibly, pleadingly. "I'd like to very much," Jo finished, wondering at her own words.

"I'm delighted," Marsh said. "Say 7:30? Where shall I call for you?" "At the Fendate Apartments," Jo told him.

the chair" by Chairman Tydings Thursday on his return to the hearing room after a conference with President Roosevelt.

Investigation Begun
WASHINGTON—(AP)—The senate's investigation of the Virgin Islands administration of Gov. Paul M. Poore Wednesday night was turned into a bitter war between Secretary Ickes and Senator Tydings, Democrat, Maryland.

The Maryland senator answered Ickes' charges of "whitewashing" a witness before the inquiry by advising him to "confine yourself to the duties for which you are appointed."

Bristling with anger at the "cheap publicity" which he accused the Interior secretary of seeking, Tydings, as chairman of the investigating committee, advised Ickes in a letter "if you want to tell the United States Senate how to conduct its business that you first get elected to his body."

The two had been at odds almost since the inquiry opened. The latest clash was precipitated after Ickes decried that Federal Judge T. Welles Wilson of the Virgin Islands, by removing from office for "judicial misconduct."

In a letter to Tydings, Ickes accused the senator of "whitewashing" Judge Wilson in his testimony before the committee.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vim
Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . an old prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 50 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

We are not always glad when we smile.

Thou wear a fair face and are gay,
And the world we deceive.

May not ever believe
We could laugh in a happier way—
Yet, down in the depths of the soul,
Often, with our faces aglow,
There's an ache and a moon
That we know of alone.

And as only the hopeless may know,
We are not always glad when we smile—

For the heart, in a tempest of pain,
May live in the guise
Of a smile in the eyes.

As a rainbow may live in the rain,
We are not always glad when we smile—

But the conscience is quick to record,
All the sorrow and sin
We are hiding within.

In plan in the sight of the Lord;
And over, O ever, till pride
And evasion shall cease to defile
Our sacred recess.

Of the soul we confess
We are not always glad when we smile—Selected.

The statements of Dr. Telsa were read by Dr. Henry A. Barton, director of the American Institute of Physics, the co-ordinating organization for much of the scientific development in the fields touched by Dr. Telsa.

"The claims of Dr. Telsa," said Dr. Barton, "are truly amazing if proofs are forthcoming to verify them. These claims are as yet unsupported by any work of which I am aware."

"Projects such as these have been envisioned for many years, and scientists the world over have been unable to bring them to fruition."

Repeal of Sales

every district, and that the bill finally passed was considered by the legislature more than seven weeks, affording ample opportunity for citizens to express themselves and advise their legislators.

"Federal aid for schools was stopped while the bill was pending in the legislature and indications were that state relief money would cease unless the state made some provision for caring for these problems," Mr. Phelps said.

"Given assurance that the sales tax measure would be brought to a vote, FERA authorities resumed their aid to the state, expecting of course, that the state would keep faith and assume its proportionate share of the responsibility for relief and for schools."

"Few people realize the magnitude of the state system of schools and the difficulties that exist in keeping the schools open. The state has 3,150 separate school districts, each operated by a lay board of directors. These directors are delegated with authority to operate the schools within the district and to disburse funds of the district. In many districts funds have shrunk to such an extent that it has been practically impossible to keep the schools open. Charges have been made of extravagance of the schools but the 10,000 to 12,000 school directors who have had direct responsibility for expenditures of school funds will tell a different story, it is asked."

"In 1926 when the local school tax was limited to 12 mills, the assessed valuation of the state was $311,000,000, compared with $435,000,000 in 1933—a reduction of nearly 30 per cent. The greatly increased percentage of tax delinquency, with the reduction in assessed valuation, has tended to offset the gain anticipated by the increase of the millage tax rate."

"Since 1931, state and local school revenue has shrunk from $18,800,000 to $11,800,000 in 1933-34, exclusive of federal aid. During the same period the average daily attendance in the schools has increased from 319,000 to 354,000. The average length of school term has decreased from 151 days to 141 days, and the average teachers' salary has decreased from $730 to $580."

"The shrinkage in revenue has not been uniform, some districts having suffered more than others. In many localities, the citizens have paid voluntary school taxes, or tuition. The history of education in the local school districts indicate that the people have faith in their schools and want them continued."

"The state Board of Education justified its endorsement of the sales tax on the ground that it will purchase additional schooling for the boys and girls of the state and that the ultimate returns will total far more than the present monetary cost. The funds which accrue to the schools will be distributed through the common school fund and their expenditure will be directed by the local directors in the 3,150 school districts."

Nikola Telsa Announces
Alleged New Scientific Discoveries

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Nikola Telsa, Jugo Slavian scientist, celebrating his 79th birthday, Wednesday claimed these three amazing developments in the sciences:

A new method and apparatus for transmitting mechanical energy any terrestrial distance.

Passage of an induction current with a varying flux one way only through a circuit without use of a commutator.

Proof after observation of cosmic rays that many of the propositions of relativity are false.

He elaborated these claims in an all-afternoon interview but did not offer proof of his assertions.

He would not confide in what laboratories he had pursued the work which, he said, had convinced him during the past year that ideas he long has entertained along these lines are correct.

He said his new means of energy transmission would be valuable in navigation, geology, physics. A ship, he declared, by means of a communication system he would develop from his discovery within a year, could be kept to a true course without misdirection in any weather.

Geologists, he asserted, would be able to explore mineral deposits from the earth's surface with more accurate results than they can attain with instruments now available. Physicians, too, he said, would be able to determine much about the interior of the earth.

The use of direct current without a commutator, he said, would revolutionize motors for automobiles if practical engineers could carry out his findings.

The statements of Dr. Telsa were read by Dr. Henry A. Barton, director of the American Institute of Physics, the co-ordinating organization for much of the scientific development in the fields touched by Dr. Telsa.

"The claims of Dr. Telsa," said Dr. Barton, "are truly amazing if proofs are forthcoming to verify them. These claims are as yet unsupported by any work of which I am aware."

Card System Finally Disposes of Few Too Many

With the runaway Giants gradually increasing their lead in the National League, Brandon, Rickey & Co. finally are being criticized in St. Louis for the seemingly reckless way in which they have disposed of Cardinals.

For 10 years it seemed that Branch Rickey couldn't make a mistake. Disposing of one player, the St. Louis farm system kept coming up with a better one, and pennants seemed to grow on trees.

But now, with the club staggering, followers of the Redbirds have figured out that had the outfit retained four pitchers, Paul Herringer, Sylvester Johnson, Tex Carleton, and Pat Malone, it would be so far in front that the Giants would be unable to catch it aboard Omaha.

Derringer alone would have kept the Cardinal breath hot on the neck of the Giants while the addition of either Johnson or Carleton probably would have assured St. Louis its sixth senior league flag in 10 years.

After a couple of dismal seasons with Cincinnati, during which he pitched splendid ball to no avail, Derringer struck his real stride with the reconstructed Reds of this year and pitched himself to a position on the National League's all-star array.

Johnson has been a consistent winner for the Phillies this season, and Carleton a mainstay for the Cubs. Pat Malone has been of some help to the Yankees.

But Rickey had no way of knowing that Paul Dean was going to stub his toe in his second year, and that Dizzy Dean was to be bumped (faster than usual). Perhaps the guiding hand of the Cardinals barked too heavily on Ray Harrell and Ed Heuser, who were brought in from subsidiaries.

The deal for Shufflin' Phil Collins, off the Phils. after the season was well under way was proof that Rickey realized his mistake. Three successive defeats by the Reds called for the Yankees.

But Rickey had no way of knowing that Paul Dean was going to stub his toe in his second year, and that Dizzy Dean was to be bumped (faster than usual). Perhaps the guiding hand of the Cardinals barked too heavily on Ray Harrell and Ed Heuser, who were brought in from subsidiaries.

The deal for Shufflin' Phil Collins, off the Phils. after the season was well under way was proof that Rickey realized his mistake. Three successive defeats by the Reds called for the Yankees.

'Through the Looking Glass'---The Quintuplets in Wonderland!

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Annette is as studious as can be. She is watching closely the movement of her own hand as revealed by the mirror. Notice her quiet concentration on the problem of how this strange little girl moves when she does. And isn't it a demure pose Annette has adopted for this first meeting with herself?

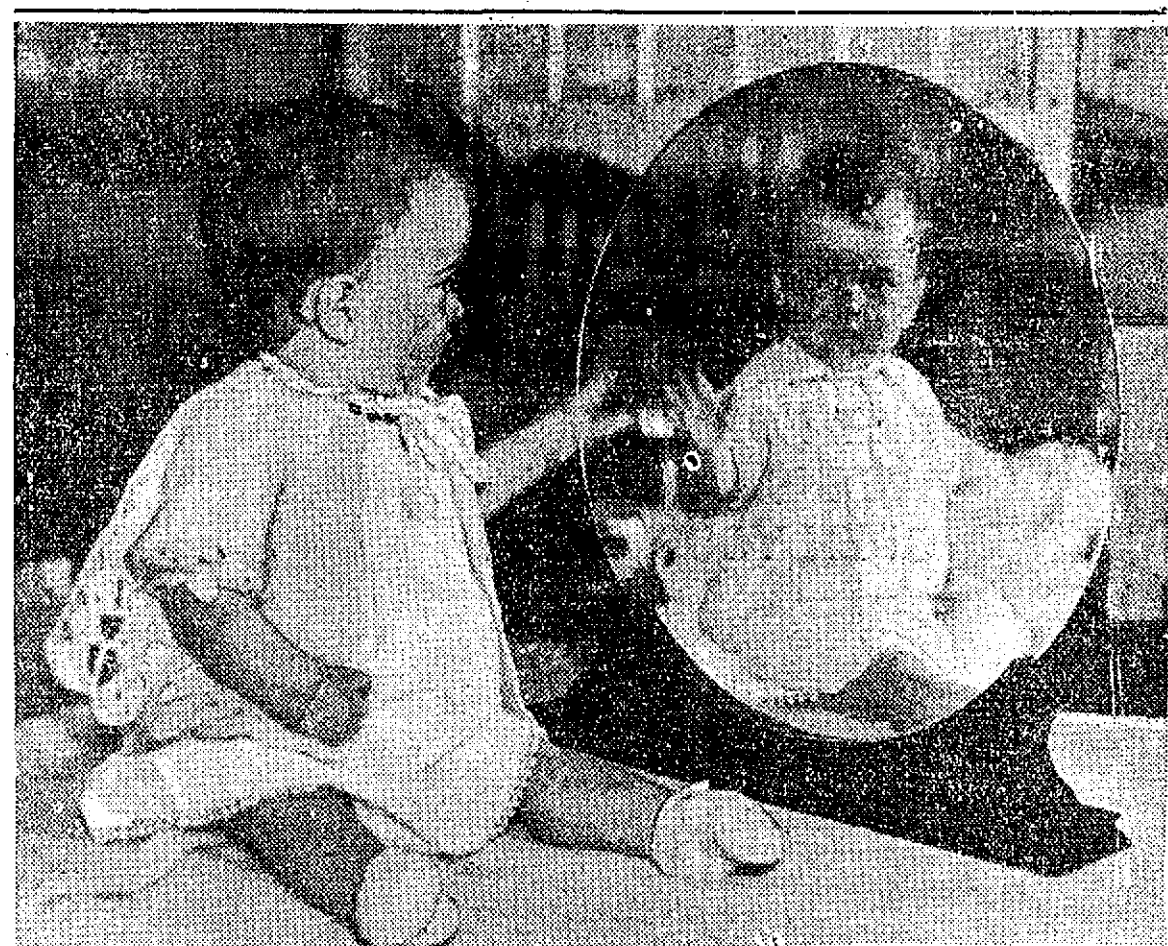

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
"Why, hello there," Yvonne seems to be saying to her own reflection in the mirror. Introduction of a big glass meant fun all around for the Dionne quintuplets, when they took turns making their own acquaintance by proxy. Yvonne seems fascinated by the presence of this engaging little stranger.

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Cecilia's chubby little hand explores cautiously. She also seems to be seeking the way to enter the magic room behind the glass. For to her baby mind, that other baby must be very real, an adventure beckoning, a new world to conquer.

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Annette is not contented to gaze through the looking-glass, but makes a personal investigation of ways and means of entering, gravely absorbed in the problem.

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Like Alice peering into the misty mirror that led into Looking-Glass House, Yvonne waves gaily in though she too were about to enter a new Wonderland through the looking-glass. And the other baby, a fitting companion for such a journey beckons her inside.

Evades Lashing for Beating Girl

He wasn't afraid to beat his three-year-old foster daughter, but rather than submit to the lash as punishment, Harry Gregory chose to spend a year in prison. Gregory, a husky painter, accompanied by his weeping wife, who received a six-month sentence, is shown leaving police headquarters at Alexandria, Va. The sentence to lash him had provided that the beating must raise welts as big as those Mary Rose had suffered.

Grace and Speed and Power and Victory

Up and over the triple bars skimming the obstacle with the grace of a bird, twilight goes with Hubert Mosley in the saddle registering a victory by a spectacular leap in the Fairfield County Hunt Club horse show. This event was one of a number of breath-taking features at the meet in Westport, Conn. which attracted a large throng of fashionable folk.

Trunk Slayer

With the confession of Merton Ward Goodrich that he murdered Lillian Gallagher, 11-year-old Detroit girl last September, Detroit authorities sought to couple Goodrich with a half dozen criminal assaults on Michigan children. Goodrich is pictured after his arrest in New York.

A Rare June Day--a la Oregon!

After glancing at this scene, folks sweltering in summer heat will agree that the poet should have written, "What is so rare as a day in June--in Oregon!" To these men, trying valiantly to drive a path through a 40-foot snowdrift to open the Mackenzie Pass highway, it's a lot of hard work. But hot weather sufferers generally wouldn't mind swapping with them.

Tour for F. D. to Prove Good Health

President Will Head for West Coast to Dispel Illness Rumor

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Official Washington was discussing many things Wednesday but none more avidly than the coast to coast whispering concerning the health of the president, his nerves and the influences behind the scenes that control his official actions.

According to the stories, which apparently have gained a prodigious circulation, the general health condition of Mr. Roosevelt has been seriously affected by the reverses sustained by the New Deal in the last few weeks and by the unpopularity of his latest innovation of statecraft. He is pictured as irritable, and subject to fits of temper.

The gossip has got into the papers, including one outstanding Democratic journal the president reaches every morning, and has touched off two chains of letters that are spreading through the country.

At the White House it is called a "whispering campaign," such as was waged against Al Smith because of his religion, and against Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 because of his physical affliction. It is indicated that the president, in due time, may take notice of the whisperings, perhaps in connection with his forthcoming transcontinental tour, announcement of which a few days ago has been linked with the gossings. On such a tour, the president would exhibit himself to the people from coast to coast and leave them able to judge the truth of the whisperings.

total of 210 applications have been filed in the office here. She further urged that some of the protests be left off, saying that the aged ought to be honestly glad of the prospect of receiving a pension.

Miss Cotton also announced the resignation of two board members, Mrs. Isabelle Onstead and Mrs. Dale Jones. Miss Cotton said that Mrs. T. S. McDavitt of Hope and Miss Ella Monroe of Washington had been recommended to fill the vacancies.

Applications will be received here each week on Tuesday and Thursday from 8:30 to 4 p. m. for the next two months. Miss Cotton also announced receipt of a bulletin from Roy Frewitt, the State Welfare Board, which said:

"I wish to stress the fact that no money is available for old age pensions or other aid, and the approved applicants will receive no assistance or pensions until money is made available by the state."

year as was the rest of the department. Although an 11,000 increase in enlisted personnel and construction of 24 ships were authorized, the navy won't have the money or the 355 planes it wanted.

Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of navy aviation, explained that while the navy had wanted $10,000,000 for 232 replacements and 273 additional planes, congress put up only $28,700,000 plus $3,300,000 to pay for contracts signed last year.

Ray Long, Noted Editor, Is Suicide

Once Earned $180,000 a Year as Editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—Ray Long, 57, noted magazine editor, writer and publisher, died Tuesday night in the emergency hospital here from a gun-shot wound in the mouth.

Found in the bedroom of his home, Long was unconscious, and there was a small rifle at his side, Glenn Blair, ambulance driver, said. Blair and his assistant, George Kern, said the wound appeared to have been self-inflicted.

Long, for 12 years editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine and president and editor of the International Magazine company, publishing Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping and other magazines, was said to have been one of the highest paid editors of all time, receiving a salary and company profits of $180,000 a year.

He was born in Lebanon, Ind., March 23, 1878, educated in Indianapolis schools and began his first newspaper work on the Indianapolis News in 1900. He became managing editor of the Cincinnati Post in 1905 and worked in a similar capacity for the Cleveland Press. In 1910 he became editor of Hampton's Magazine, later serving as editor of the Red Book group and going to Cosmopolitan in 1910.

Long had been an executive in the Columbia studio story department and shortly before his death was named Western editor of Liberty.

adopt—is poisonous, both to education and American institutions. From the feminist standpoint, her pretense is one of the great documents of the decade. She says:

"The university is supposed to be an educational institution, not a work-relief organization. The trustees' duty is to select the best teachers available."

"Education is prostituted when university positions are turned into jobs to be held for the income received. Instead of jobs to be done with reference to the best interests of the students, is the university, when it trains women for teaching and other professional positions, condemning them to lives of celibacy or wasting the state's money training them for positions

He's Off! In a Big Spill

Spine-tingling spills abounded, but none was more spectacular than this one to the Mt. Peninsula, O., hill climb, sponsored by the Akron Motorcycle club, when one of the speeding mounts bucked off its rider, who showed his skill by alighting uninjured. More than 5000 people saw the climb, over a course of 265 feet of rough ground, almost straight up in two of the stretches.

"Solid" Gasoline Proves Successful

New Fuel, Slow-Burning, Eliminates Danger From Explosion

NEW YORK—(AP)—Gasoline solidified to look like a piece of cheese was used successfully to run an ordinary gasoline engine in tests announced at the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, New York University.

An eight-year search for a safety gasoline, something non-explosive, which will do the same work as liquid gasoline, has been made.

In the simple test engine, the hard gasoline was more efficient than ordinary gasoline, under exactly the same running conditions. The new stuff will not explode. A piece of it the size of a butter pat was stuck on the end of a knife. A lighted match was held close, its flame almost touching. Nothing happened.

When the flame made actual contact, the hard gas lighted as quickly as a sheet of paper and burned as briskly but was extinguished easier. One puff of breath blew out the flames.

The tests were made under direction of Dr. Alexander Klemin, director of the school. The hard gasoline was invented by Adolph Prussin of New York.

The cheese-life stuff is the latest in a series of more than 3,000 batches of hydrocarbons which he has hardened in the search for an efficient, hard gasoline. The test engine is four-cylinder, compression ratio, 5.2 to 1; bore 2 1/2 inches; stroke 3 1/2 inches.

The solidified gasoline was inclosed in a jacket, heated by the engine exhaust. The exhaust was pre-heated by operating the engine first with ordinary gasoline. A special carburetor was used for the solid gas.
